About our new name

The Summit Planning Committee voted in January 2019 to transform the name of the Summit from the Food Access Summit into the Food Justice Summit. Our work is ever changing and evolving. And as our work shifts, so has the way we approach this Summit. Changing the name of this Summit will not instantly solve all inequities, but it is a public step towards acting on values that enforce the need for racial equity to be present as we plan for a more vibrant food system. We hope you will join us on this journey and at the 2019 Food Justice Summit.

Keynote Speakers

Chef Sean Sherman,
Founder, The Sioux
Chef

Amani Olugbala,
Community Educator,
Soul Fire Farm

Why you should come

- Inspiring stories from food justice leaders in Minnesota and beyond.
- Networking with people engaged in all aspects of food from farmers to hunger relief to public health and grassroots organizers.
- Strategic conversations on actions needed to create a food system that works for everyone.
- Workshops on a wide range of topics from indigenous foods to advocacy for beginners.
